8. Security Classification Guide for representatives)

The proposed guide was reviewed by the members who agreed that, from an intelligence viewpoint, the guide, with certain minor exceptions indicated below, was suitable for use by the U.S. delegation to the Geneva Technical Conference. It was recognized that some disclosures of intelligence collection techniques would be involved, but it was not felt that such disclosures would seriously affect U.S. ability to collect intelligence on the Soviet Union. The consensus was, however, that actual disclosures should be kept to the minimum required to further U.S. aims at the Conference and be conditioned by the degree of cooperation demonstrated by the Soviet representatives at the Conference.

Specifically, the members agreed: (a) that paragraph 5.c. (2) should be kept at its present classification (Secret) with the understanding that the IAC would give priority reconsideration to declassifying specific data required if this appeared desirable as the Conference progressed; (b) that any release to the USSR of information on test locations under paragraph 5. c. (4) be limited to the Semipalatinsk and Novaya Zemlya test sites; and (c) that data referred to under paragraphs 5. c. (5), (6) and (7) should apply only to the Soviet shots listed in Appendix A. In this connection, it was understood that the members approved the recommended declassifications in paragraphs 1 through 5 and in paragraph 7 from a purely intelligence viewpoint. The members also agreed that they should not consider the declassification of the items listed in paragraphs 6 and 8, including the appended Bethe article, since the IAC is not responsible for U.S. weapons and weapons effects information. The Chairman noted that the Atomic Energy Commission and the Department of Defense were undertaking declassification actions with respect to items in this guide which were properly within their purview.
